Entering Canada Illegally: February 2017 – September 2022 Source Countries

The screenshot shows the official website of the Immigration and Refugee Board of Canada. The header includes the organization's name in English and French, a search bar, and a navigation menu with categories like 'Refugee claims', 'Refugee appeals', 'Immigration appeals', and 'Detention reviews / Admissibility hearings'. The main content area is titled 'Refugee Protection Claims Made by Irregular Border Crossers' and includes a breadcrumb trail: 'Home → Statistics → Refugee Protection Claims Made by Irregular Border Crossers'. Below the title, there is a link to 'Understanding statistics on refugee claims by irregular border crosser' and a section for 'Important notes about statistics on irregular border crossers'. The notes state that irregular border crossers are defined as individuals who entered Canada between official ports of entry and that the IRB is unable to report on them prior to February 2017.

Now for something that isn't covered much by mainstream (or alternative) media. Who exactly is coming into Canada illegally, in between official border ports of entry? What are the numbers? Fortunately, the Immigration and Refugee Board has at least some information to share.

As readers will know, the overwhelming majority of people coming illegally are entering through Roxham Road in Quebec. They should be turned away, but aren't.

Let's look at some hard numbers:

The IRB lists some totals as <20, and they claim that this is done for privacy reasons. The logic seems to be that if there were only a few who crossed, it would be easier to identify them.

Over 73,000 people have come illegally since 2017, less than 6 years ago. The above totals are from February 2017 through September 2022. The I.R.B. claims that it didn't have access to such information prior to this. Nonetheless, it's a good snapshot at what's going on.

Isn't this lovely? The bulk of the people ILLEGALLY entering Canada are from the 3rd World. They've already passed on at least one safe country — the United States — one that gets hundreds of thousands of applications per year.

And again, this could be stopped very quickly. However, politicians (of all stripes) actively work against the interests of their own citizens.
